The whole of the changes will change mortlake for the worse. The high density of flats and properties will add up to 40% more people in one small area. The area will be swamped with vehicles that the roads will not be able to handle. Highway safety will be an issue with so much more traffic on the narrow roads especially during school start and leaving times. Traffic will build up and turning and parking will be issues compounding the highway safety concerns.

To add so many people in one area will increase noise significantly to an unpleasant leve in the area, by the water and in Mortlake generally.

The density is dreadful. The contractors seem to want to squash as many properties in one small area such that you will see a complete block of buildings from the waters edge and local bridges.

It worries me that Mortlake, the infrastructure and highways will simply not be able to cope with the number of flats and people being proposed.

The changes to be made are far too little to be effective to keep the highways safe.
