Comment: We have waited a long time to get a scheme that broadly meets many disparate opinions and this is certainly far better than the previous application..

The notification sent to me this week is therefore supported

The landscape is supported because at the end of the day the expert arboroculturists have to be left to manage and there has been adjustment to people's views. It is very important that we plant for future generations and this sometimes means a removal of lesser trees in the interests of the future.

I do not mind at all that there is historical referencing in the landscape.

It sparks some interest and as we know, nothing in "recreations" is ever 100% correct. It is however still educative and attractive.

The park really does need some seasonal colour and this does the job.

Then, as regards the café, irrespective of detail design, the avoidance of new extension really does respond to local people's and particularly neighbour's worries over intrusion into the listed buildings at the rear.

It also now provides a more flexible area for clubs.
