Comment: 1300 people in the nearby area have raised concerns about the traffic implications of this scheme, particularly when other nearby plans are taken into account.

I imagine that the 1300 are all adults, many presumably with well-paid jobs requiring intelligence, imagination and common sense and yet Councillor Ehrlichman calls them all 'naive'.

In a sombre moment he must admit that he cannot be up to the job, and in the interests of democracy he should recant and walk away.

Without an in-depth review of traffic implications and detailed plans to mitigate the issues that have already been raised, the scheme - in any case amateurishly and insultingly vague in much of its detail - involving so much housing and a school, has to be killed off, before it materialises and the resultant gridlock and pollution kills people.
