Comment: Dare to be Divine!

Very few people in this world, let alone in this area, have an innate awareness of how to live in harmony with themselves and consequently with the natural world, which has been cradling us from the beginning; our mother Earth. We're standing at the threshold of great change! All that we see with our narrowed view is destruction, essentially the mirrored manifestation of every single belief of almost everyone of us. But there is a bigger picture we're headed towards, or is it one heading towards us?! A world that speaks of union, of being One again. Harmony. Meanwhile, systems will have to fall apart like concrete crumbling by those earthly roots of change. Nature will prevail. Who here has truly ever even seen our great kingfisher birds? Valorous birds they are! They have been known for their cultural and spiritual significance. Transformation and Prosperity is what they symbolise, reflected in their glorious kingly plumage. Let's listen to the message of nature, we've all but forgotten to hear. We all are wounded creatures and as such have wounded mother Earth. Let's bring forth change and dare to be divine, and walk along our river as noble beings once again. The soul of any artist speaks truth from the heart. We may not always like it, mostly because it speaks directly to a dark side we haven't faced, and only partly because the execution is not quite to our taste. And so be it! Surely the cause alone is worth it. Why is there planning required one must ask instead?! This is Visualisation on a big wall! A true and virtuous seed sown for our Arcadia, one that we nurture every day, in every way. In return it will nourish us, it will stop us in our tracks until its roots have anchored. Now - this is an easy way to dare to be divine!
